In Sufi terms, such a woman would be someone who has been so transformed by knowledge and practice that God has given her a light in her heart. In her hearing, in her eyesight, and so on. God has, in short, “made her into a light.” One way to understand what “women” are is to conceptualize them in terms of their opposites.

Women of Light in Sufism | Muhyiddin Ibn Arabi Society

Women continue to be involved in Sufi orders today, in Muslim countries and among Muslim women in the western world also. Helinski mentions the Naqshabandi, Chishti, Bektashi and Mehlevi orders among those with women leaders as well as participants.-7 North African Sufi groups where women are involved include the Tijanni, Qadiri, Rahmani, Isawi and Nasiri, among others.
